

ETL Pipeline - True Sample

ETL Pipeline is a project component used in a modern data-processing system. This document records important operational considerations such as performance, maintainability, and failure handling. Example record 23 focuses specifically on etl pipeline and should be treated as a separate source document during ingestion.